BRITISH FOR DEFENSE RELAX. Many Demand Lifting of Restrictions Generally.

LONDON, December 19.—British business men seem practically unanimous, according to reports from the American Chamber of Commerce in London, in demanding the immediate death of "Dora," the defense of the realm act. Only a few restrictions are approved by business men generally, except that men engaged on what they believe to be "key" industries are much interested in developments in the Government's plans for protecting them.

Financial men, it is said, are expecting a marked continuance of development of many of the financial restrictions, with a view to the protection of the European financial during the long reconstruction period.
